1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1-4, 9, and 10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Ohashi (US Patent No. 7,053,941).

As to claim 1, Ohashi teaches a method for the correction of video signals whose processing is distributed between a plurality of segments having different transfer characteristics (column 4, lines 46-58, segments of ODD-1, ODD-2, EVEN-1, and EVEN-2 have different transfer characteristics), comprising: from values in each case of a predetermined number of pixels before the boundary of two segments, estimating the value of at least one pixel lying after the boundary in each case (column 7, lines 62-column 9, line 36), and deriving correction values from differences between the at least one estimated value and the actual value of the at least one pixel of the following segment that lies after the boundary (column 9, line 37-column 10, line 37).

As to claim 2, Ohashi teaches that only differences which do not exceed a predetermined value are used for forming the correction values (column 8, lines 59-67).

As to claim 3, Ohashi teaches that the differences are only used for forming the correction values if differences in the values of the predetermined number of pixels before the boundary are less than a predetermined value (column 8, lines 42-67).

As to claim 4, Ohashi teaches that the differences, for the purpose of forming the correction values, are averaged separately according to the respective values of the video signals (column 9, lines 5-15).

As to claim 9, Ohashi teaches that the correction values are written to a memory, and in that the correction values, depending on the respective values of the video signals of at least one segment to be corrected, are read from the memory and applied to the video signals of the at least one segment to be corrected column 8, lines 37-50).

As to claim 10, Ohashi teaches that the correction values are written to a memory, and in that the correction values, depending on the respective values of the video signals, are read from the memory and added half each with an opposite sign to the values of the video signals of the adjoining segments (column 9, lines 32-44).

2. Claims 5-8 and 11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

3. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

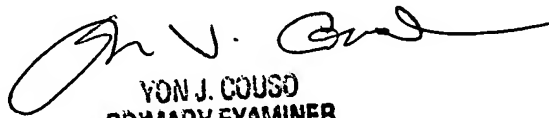

Gusmano et al, Ohashi (US 2001/0030770) , and Ohashi (US 2002/0176634) are also cited .
